

1. CALLING ALL DIVAS

Who says big phones are "out"? For fashionistas who yawn at Razrs, look no further for your next conversation piece. As touted in The Devil Wears Prada, the Bang & Olufsen BeoCom2 is sculptural, funky, and a sure-fire way to call attention to yourself. Available in an array of cool aluminum colors, the phone sits naturally in the hand, matches the curve shape of your face, and has a unique ring tone especially composed for BeoCom2. $1,050; at Vivali, Coral Gables, 305/529-0503

2. WEIRD SCIENCE

It's got the wood grain paneling, joysticks, and one-dimensional forms that are as easy on the eyes as Ms. Pac-Man. That's right, '80s video-game-lovers, rejoice! The new Atari Flashback 2 is modeled after the beloved Atari 2600 console, making it the ultimate re-creation of the classic favorite. Stocked with 40 original games, including Pong, Asteroids, Centipede, Millipede, Lunar Lander, Missile Command, Combat, and others, the trip down memory lane is so sweet, you will almost forget your Xbox...almost. $40; at Target stores

3. MOD BOX

Designed by Henry Kloss, the PAL (portable audio laboratory) radio is 6.5 inches of '50s-style fun, with the perk of updated quality. Automatic controls keep frequency locked to the center of the station for those who tune into FM or AM. There's also an auxiliary input jack for iPods, CD players, MP3 players or other devices so you can really personalize your tunes without compromising style. Available in red, yellow, white, pink and green. $150; at Moss, www.mossonline.com.

4. TUNING IN

Vanilla Ice, MC Hammer... were any '90s rappers seen without a boombox on their shoulders? As it is the decade du jour, Sony has taken notes. With an aggressive XpIMd Power Drive design and a large 100mm power drive woofer, the new Sony Xplod boombox rocks with both power and precision. Four preset sound modes, manual power drive woofer control, line input and CD-R/RW playback make this boombox a true music machine, sounding as good as it looks. Parachute pants not included. $109; at Best Buy stores
